COULD THE 'GREAT RESIGNATION' TURN INTO THE 'GREAT REGRET'

The Great Resignation has been at the forefront of the economy since the beginning of 2021 and shows no signs of slowing down as we finish out Q1 of 2022.

Almost 4.3 million people quit their jobs in January, according to a new report from the US Department of Labor. There were also 11.3 million job openings, indicating that the U.S. labor market is remaining strong and steady in the new year.

This uncommon level of resignations shows that we are in a strong market with an abundant amount of opportunities. However, individuals are realizing they are switching to new companies with no significant gain. Sometimes the grass is not always greener. We will dive deeper into this subject next month.

We hope to use this newsletter to share our insights, best practices, and tips that will help any individual in their career and beyond. Please reach out if there are any topics you would like us to discuss.

Sincerely,

- The MRT Team
